

two hundred stenographers from San Francisco to Boston would make!

Think of Larry Sullivan as the gentlemanly faro dealer! What a hit Nat Goodwin would make crawling under a convenient bed every time the stocks went down! Imagine, if you can, "God-Bless-You" Lindsay turning off the electric fans to stop an overdraft! And hear that mob of Broad street kikes walling when George Graham cut off their meal tickets! The stormy scene in "Cleopatra" would be a selling plater beside the latter, and no actor in the world could properly portray every other character in such a play.

The thing to do is to get the original cast and put over the one best bet on the theatrical horizon for 1911 and 1912.

It is difficult to write at all of the wanton shooting of Sergeant Johnston of the police force Wednesday morning at the Albert hotel by Elmer Dewey, a half-drunk "private detective."

Coming as the culmination of a long series of murders and crimes that have shocked Salt Lake as not before in years, it has greatly incensed public opinion. For anyone who saw and felt the temper of the mob that gathered on State street opposite the Orpheum and in front of police headquarters Wednesday night the impression is strong that Salt Lake narrowly missed a lynching party.

The situation of Johnston at this writing is pitiable.

The less said of Dewey and his wife the better, probably. Their lives were evidently correctly attuned to the sphere in which they moved. The woman's statement, in her explanation of the shooting, "that when Elmer drinks his imagination runs wild," ought to form a first-class defense, as the defenses of criminals go in Utah, when the case comes to trial.

STAT NOMINIS.

"What's that you call your mule?"

"I call him 'Corporation,'" answered the old colored man.

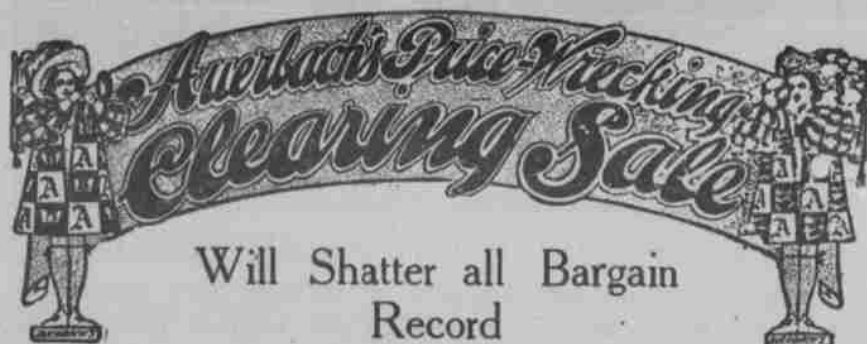

"How did you come to give him such a name?"

"Fum studyin' de animal an' readin' de papahs. Dat mule gets mo' blame an' abuse dan any'ting else in de township, an goes ahead havin' his own way jes de same."—Washington Star.
